Hi Ken, Kelly - Nice to meet, virtually. And congratulations for funding Tor - it's very consistent with what IBB is trying to do with bringing information to constrained environments.

It would be worth talking at some point about the work Global Voices does and how it might be a useful resource for you guys. Unfortunately, I'm about to disappear to central Europe for about two weeks - I'd be happy to connect in late November or early December, via email, phone or chat.

Best regards,

Hi Ken and Kelly, nice to know you here.

Roger, thanks for e-introduction. I was too busy organizing the 2nd Chinese Blogger Conference\(cnbloggercon\) in Hangzhou and replied late.

We did have a sub-topic in cnbloggercon on GFW issues and brainstormed some new ideas that can leverage resources from different sources, both from domestic and international. We are going to set up a higfw.com site to educate Chinese people on censorship in a funny way, along with handy tutorials on toolsets to support free access in this country. Will share more in GFW mailing list soon.

The one we have in mind (a Windows bundle that includes Tor, Vidalia, Firefox, and Torbutton) will be about 15M, give or take.

We also have a number of download mirrors in Europe, so it's not critical. But if you have a server that can happily handle the load, do let us know. :)

Hi Kelly,

I'm now back from some more travels. We've been focusing the past few weeks on cleaning up our current development packages and getting them closer to being "stable" releases. There's a new Torbutton, a new Tor alpha, a new Firefox security release, and soon there will be a new Vidalia release.

My tasks for this evening:

- Finish up the monthly report for January and send it to you
- Start making a bullet-point list of points we'd want to include in our mass mailing.
- Mail Vlad Miller <[REDACTED]> and tell him in general terms about the upcoming launch in Russia and ask for his advice

(In talking to our Russian translator from Kiev, he said that the pppu folks could help out a lot in spreading Tor well in Russia, and I should try to involve them. Do you know any of them? Would you like an introduction?)

Next tasks would be:

- Get the Tor Browser Bundle onto the table at <https://www.torproject.org/download#Dev>
- Get a new version of the Tor Browser Bundle out, that includes the latest security fix for Firefox ("visit the wrong website and your computer gets compromised")
- Boot Windows and give the latest version of TBB some more QA and usability testing.
- Take the bullet-point list of things to mail out, and work with IBB to turn that into an email and then get it translated, and then build a plan for a timeframe.

More in a bit,

Also, it looks like the conference agenda doesn't include it, but Paul and I will be doing a broader Tor talk on that Thursday afternoon, at the same hotel, for some conference people who are sticking around. (They wanted the talk to be part of the conference, but then they changed the conference to not have any talks, so this was the result.)

I bet nobody would mind if you wanted to stick around and participate. (It's fine if not too.)

I'm free all afternoon next Tuesday the 19th, so Ken's availability will likely be the limiting factor.

My guess is that neither of us will make the Tuesday night reception in Reston.

I don't think there is anything you need to prepare specifically to discuss, just the usual sorts of things we're likely to discuss in the conference calls, but in person this time. Since our contract modification (and the increased funding) kicks in on the 24th, we're interested in how the ideas you discussed previously about what you'd do with additional funding are going to look like in reality.

Yes, that site is one of the official Tor mirrors:

<https://www.torproject.org/mirrors.html.en>

It's run by Pei Hanru, one of our Tor volunteers and researchers in China.

However, we don't maintain mirrors as carefully as we should (it's one of those things we could sure use another volunteer for), so it may not be as up to date or functional as it should be. And in any case, users should always check the PGP signature of the Tor download they get, no matter where they get it from. See e.g. <https://wiki.torproject.org/noreply/TheOnionRouter/VerifyingSignatures> for details.

Hope that helps,

Hi Ken,

That sounds great. We'll talk to you then, and before then we'll send out a blurb for the month's progress.

The most interesting news is actually from today -- it looks like we finally got the funding from the European nonprofit we've been working with, and that looks like it'll let us hire a third developer to work on blocking-resistance. Woo! (Insert the traditional caveats for same-day news; we'll have more solid news on Thursday. :)

Thanks,

Hi folks,

I'm putting together a list of June progress. While I do that,

Also, I'd like to introduce you to Andrew Lewman, one of our

Hi Ken et al,

I'm coming to DC Aug 23 to meet with a SAFER team. Are you around the day after for me to drop by and catch up on things?

If the timing works I'll also plan to bring Chris Soghoian, an IU grad student who has done Tor-related research and now works with the FTC in the DC area trying to teach legislators about the Internet and technology in general. Hopefully it will be good that you two know about each other.

Any requests on timing?

For example, we could do late morning or early afternoon.

(If possible, I'd like to leave room to head over to State after to teach Ian Schuler more about Tor.)

Malita, can you cross-check with your own records and see if the attached invoice from Andrew (#38) has not been paid? If not, please process this for payment.

Ok, we're still looking these over and trying to figure out what is going on. Unfortunately, we've found some discrepancies that we're going to need to figure out and clear up, and may need revised invoices to clear up our paperwork. For instance, there are overlapping invoice dates -- invoice 35 is for period 3/1/2011 - 3/31/2011, while invoice 36 is for 3/17/2011-4/17/2011.

Additionally, going back through my own email on this, I'm seeing we had missing payment issues from 2010 which I believe should have been resolved, but I wonder if what really happened is payments from 2011 were credited to 2010 instead.

I've also forwarded everything along to be investigated further here, and will let you know when either more information is needed or is available.

Kelly,

I am The Tor Project's CFO and was hoping you could help. We are closing out our books for the year and we seem to be missing payments for some of our invoices for 2011. I have attached all the invoices for 2011 and a statement showing how we applied the payments. Would it be possible for you to look into your records and see if you had received all of our invoices? We seem to be missing $45k (or three invoices) worth of payments?

Thanks, I appreciate any help you can provide.
